About the Index

Following nearly 20 years of on-going conflict with a public aim of dismantling Al-Qaeda and other terrorist groups, violence and terror attacks remain an on-going threat in Afghanistan. Additionally, poppy plantations in the country continue to contribute to Afghanistan's status as the world's leading producer of illicit opium in the world. In order to develop and implement effective interventions, regular, reliable data on safety, security and narcotics is needed.

This report includes four indices: public safety and security, countering narcotics, peace talks support, and governance trust.

This report shares the findings for the first of an on-going series of public opinion polls to track changes in safety and security in Afghanistan. This round of public opinion surveys was conducted between December 2018 and April 2019.

The interventions made by international organizations to counter terrorism and narcotics will be measured regularly and independently. In this way, Statistics and More plans to provide timely and accurate insights for policy makers and identify trends to impact interventions in a timely manner.

The indices use the following rating scale:

Less than 1.5	Very bad
1.5 to 2.5	Bad
2.6 to 3.0	Moderate
3.1 to 3.5	Good
3.5 to 4.0	Very good

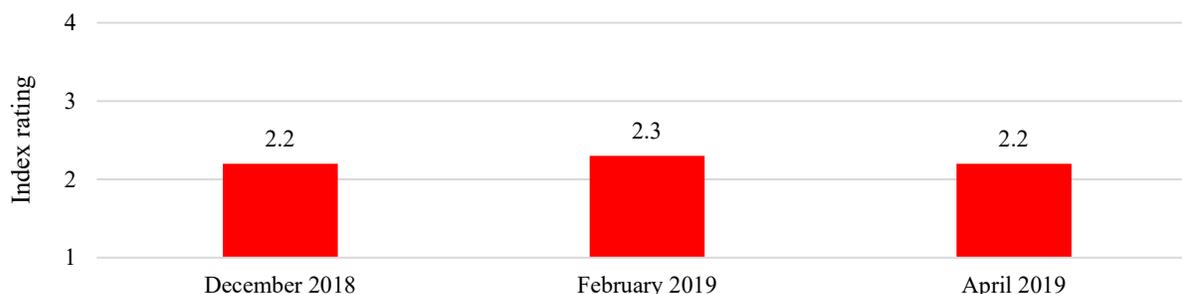

The Public Safety and Security Index (PSSI)

This index measures public opinion about security and public safety in Afghanistan. The index is developed based on 10 survey questions. The results show that perceptions of safety and security are generally low and did not change between December 2018 and April 2019. The findings presented in the table below suggests that;

- The Afghan Government need to make actions to apply rule of law equally for all people in Afghanistan
- The trust between police and public needed to be improved
- People don't feel safe while walking after dark
- Mafia-style organizations cause security problems for people of Afghanistan
- Robbery cases are high and increasing
- People do not trust the justice system. This is a very serious problem and the Afghan Government needs to address the situation quickly

The Peace Talks Index (PTI)

People in Afghanistan are not fully supporting the peace talks with the Taliban. The PTI decreased slightly in April 2019 compared to February 2019. However, same as in February 2019, Afghan women do not support talks with Taliban and do not see that peace talks as the only way to bring peace. Afghan men mainly support the talks. Respondents reported that they have moderate trust to USA and Russia on peace talks with Taliban.

People interviewed mentioned their concerns about lack of transparency about peace talks with Taliban recently organized in Qatar. Same meeting was also criticized by Afghan Government as Afghan officials was excluded from the meeting with Taliban by the organizers, namely Qatar and USA Government. In fact, such an approach cant be successful and may cause further damages in Afghanistan. Also, it will also cause negative impact on USA foreign policy in Afghanistan. Therefore, It is essential to coordinate the peace talks with Taliban in coordination with Afghan Government. Also, this process should be transparent and should be shared with public. Otherwise, process will fail (see the peace talks case between Turkey and PKK in 2015) and will cause unwanted negative impacts. Such as, there can be a massive migration flow from Afghanistan to EU, Turkey and North American countries. Indeed, most of the people interviewed clearly indicated that they plan to move out from Afghanistan with the first opportunity.

In addition to this, it is essential to coordinate the peace talk process together with Russia. Because, the previous meeting organized between Taliban and Afghan Officials in Moscow was a good start. Furthermore, the recent meeting of Loya Jirga positively contributed to the peace talks process with Taliban. Though, it does not give immediate results but this process should be in any case slow and well shared with the public.

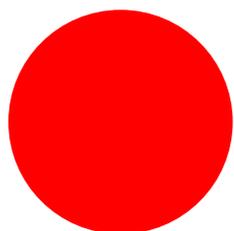

Also, it is important to include the other important players such as Pakistan in the region in the peace talk process.

It is important to note that peace talk process is an important opportunity to bring peace to Afghanistan. But it has multiple parameters and cant be completed without mutual agreement between all parties concerned, especially people of Afghanistan.

Also, USA has an important role to bring peace to Afghanistan. Therefore, US cant leave Afghanistan alone in terms of not only in peace talks with Taliban and development of the country as well.

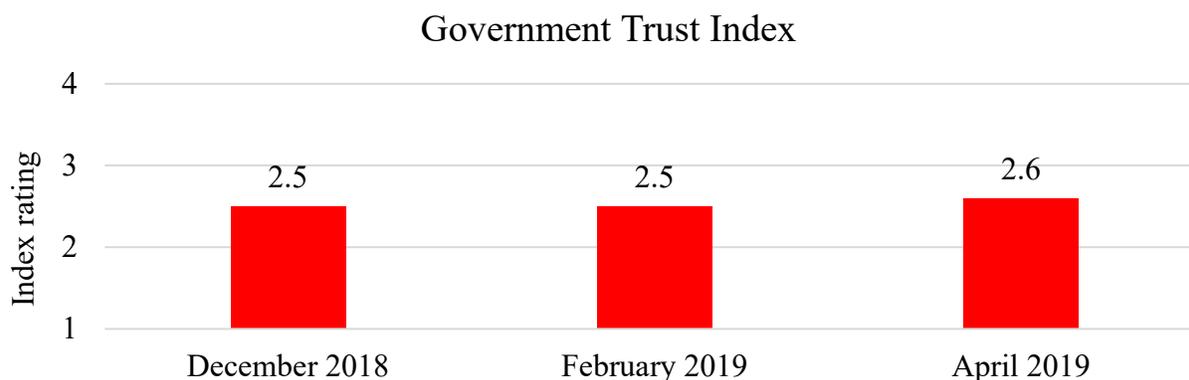

Last but not the least, any deal with Taliban should include important guarantees provided by the Taliban. Such as , Taliban should immediately cuts links with IS terrorism organization and should help Afghan Government to remove the terrorists out from Afghanistan. In addition to this, Taliban stop using the drug industry and help Afghan Government to stop drug cultivation in the country.

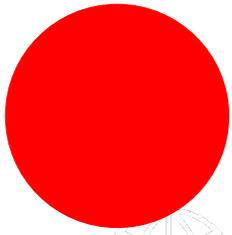

The Government Trust Index (GTI)

Respondents expressed low levels of trust in Afghan Government organizations. The lowest level of trust was expressed for Afghan politicians. The GTI slightly increased from 2.5 in December 2018 to 2.6 in April 2019.

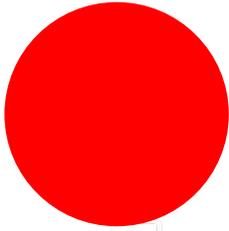

Countries Supporting Afghanistan

Afghan people report believing that the United States of America, India and Germany are the top three countries supporting Afghanistan, followed by Turkey, Russia and the United Arab Emirates.

Countries Supporting Afghanistan

Around 50% of the Afghan respondents report that they want to move out of Afghanistan. Most of respondents who report that they want to move report that they wish to move to the United States of America, Canada or the European Union.
